

SOUTH LONDONDERRY.

Impressive and Interesting Exercises.

There were pre-Memorial day exercises in the town hall Monday afternoon, conducted by the Sons of Veterans and the school teachers of the two villages. A procession was formed at Grand Army hall, led by the South Londonderry Cornet band, followed by the Sons of Veterans, the veterans of the Grand Army, the Woman's Relief corps, the school children, the Boy Scouts and citizens, and marched to the mound erected to the memory of the unknown dead, which was decorated by the pupils. A military salute was given by the Sons of Veterans. They then entered the town hall for the exercises. There was music by the band, singing by a male quartet and by a mixed quartet and solos. There was an address by Clarence Hewes. Nearly 100 children took part in the exercises, with singing, recitations, etc., and acquitted themselves in a creditable manner, showing much painstaking by their teachers. The hall was handsomely decorated with flowers, ferns, evergreen and bunting. The exercises were very impressive and interesting. The graves in the different cemeteries were decorated in the forenoon by the Sons of Veterans and the Woman's Relief corps with wreaths, flowers and flags.

It included old soldiers, teachers and their pupils and citizens who marched to the cemetery, where the graves of the soldiers were decorated with flags and wreaths. On the return march they stopped in front of the Masonic building where the band played a few selections. Then they went to the dining room, where dinner had been prepared for the committee. At 1:30 the people assembled in the church to hear the address by Harrie B. Chase of Brattleboro, which was highly spoken of. Much praise is due to all who took part in observing the occasion.

WILMINGTON.

Edward Cassius Boyd.

"An honest man's the noblest work of God. To live in the hearts of those we love, is not to die. There is no death; what seems so is transition."

These beautiful sentiments can truly be said of the late E. C. Boyd, who died Monday, May 22, after a long and patiently borne illness. He was a native and lifelong resident of Wilmington, where he was born Aug. 29, 1844, and was a loyal and efficient member of the community.

He was one of the nine children of the late Benozil and Julia Ray Boyd, also natives of Wilmington. He married in 1870 Ella, daughter of the late Newton Bassett. They were the parents of six children. Five of them and their mother are still living. His father's place in the community, the homes of the four daughters are in different places, Rose Ward in Westminster, Edith Farnum in Newfane, Grace Heald in Washington, D. C., Mildred Hill in Keene, N. H. He also leaves four grandchildren and one great-grandson, and two sisters, Helen Newell, of Illinois, and two brothers, Leslie D. of Illinois and Dr. H. W. of Nyack, N. Y.

The funeral services were largely attended by neighbors and friends who showed their respect and esteem by many beautiful floral tributes. Rev. F. M. Blinn, the organist and choir of the Universalist church united in making the services very impressive.

The wonderful instinct of the robins has been noticed the past week in visiting their nestlings from the ravages of the red-headed woodpecker. As many as five male robins were seen Saturday, near the sunset hour, circling round a red-headed woodpecker and walking up and down the street, each keeping in sight his family tree.

The writer has a chipping sparrow which has a nest in a wooden box on the mother porch. Last Friday while the mother bird was after food, a Baltimore Oriole came for material for her own home making and began devastation on Mrs. Sparrow's nest, but was soon discovered and driven away by the owners of the nest. Strlings have been provided for the oriole's wants and are received with gratitude. A Boston bull dog, a house cat and the sparrows occupy the same porch.
